THE WOLF Internet Radio Places Third in 2017 College Broadcasters Inc. Awards

CARROLLTON, GA – The University of West Georgia’s The WOLF Internet Radio placed third in the category of Best Audio Regularly Scheduled Program for the for College Broadcasters, Inc.’s (CBI) 2017 National Student Production Awards. The award was given to the spring season of “The Night Howl” produced by Bre’anna Singleton, Hayley Barker, Ashly Traylor, Edosa Isibor, Brandon Wright and Tomichella Curry. This marks the second win of the year in a national competition, and the first for The Night Howl.

“This is a major boost of confidence for our station and allows us to showcase the reasons why The WOLF Internet Radio is the best radio station in our state,” said General Manager Shawn Isaacs. “This is be a highlight for our graduating seniors in the job market, and entering freshmen looking for experiential learning.”

All entries were entirely student-produced for a campus media outlet or college credit course. The contest was open to all college or university radio stations including (over-the-air, Internet, and cable/closed circuit) television facilities and other student media outlets.

Best Audio Regularly Scheduled Program is a highly coveted category that showcases the best radio content from around the nation. The category encompasses student produced programs that run at regular intervals throughout a semester. The WOLF placed ahead of Radio DePaul and behind Colorado State University and North Central College, whom placed first and second respectively. No other Georgia college or university placed as finalist.

“College radio is an awesome opportunity for young broadcasters to learn about the industry,” said host Singleton. “This award is a testament to the quality of our professors at UWG and The WOLF Internet Radio. It’s an honor to have our work recognized!”

CBI hosted the 2017 National Student Electronic Media Convention on November 2-4 and announced the winners during an evening ceremony.
